THE OVERVIEW

According to research from the Harvard Center on the Developing Child and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, root causes of orphanhood and vulnerability in children include violence and poverty. The world's best research has also shown what works to address violence against children and poverty for all children, including those with disabilities. This research is described in INSPIRE, which is an evidence-based resource for everyone committed to preventing and responding to violence against children and poverty — from government to grassroots, and from civil society to faith communities, to the private sector. It represents a select group of strategies based on the best available evidence to help countries and communities intensify their focus on the prevention program and services with the greatest potential to reduce violence against children and poverty for all children, as well as their tragic consequences — including family separation, injury, infectious diseases, and even death. The seven strategies are:

- Implementation and Enforcement of Laws
- Norms and Values
- Safe Environments
- Parent and Caregiver Support
- Income and Economic Strengthening
- Response and Support Services
- Education and Life Skills

There are two cross-cutting activities that help connect and assess progress towards the strategies — Multisector Collaboration and Monitoring and Evaluation.

The seven strategies are most effective when implemented as part of a comprehensive, multisectoral plan that harnesses their synergies, as the strategies are intended to work in combination and reinforce each other. Though stakeholders in many countries are working to eliminate violence against children and poverty and their consequences, their efforts are not always well coordinated and supported, and few are undertaken at a large scale that serves all children, including those with disabilities. Coordination is, therefore, essential, as no single sector or organization can deliver the full package of programs and no individual government can tackle the growing threats to its children that now transcend national borders.

THE VISION

WWO supports INSPIRE's vision as a world where all governments, with the strong participation of civil society, faith alliances, and communities, routinely implement and monitor interventions to prevent and respond to violence against all children and adolescents and help them reach their full potential. We believe Christ cares about all children who are abused — including those who are being abused in their homes, those who are abused in orphanages, and those whose abuse drove them from their homes and into orphanages and the streets. Jesus himself shows his concern when He says that it would be better for someone to have a millstone tied around their neck and to drown in the deepest sea than to harm a child (Matthew 18:6, Luke 17:2). The clear meaning of His words is that all abuse of children should be avoided.

The WWO Roadmap is published on the 30-year anniversary of the Convention of the Rights of the Child (CRC). The CRC obliges nations to take all appropriate legislative, administrative, social, and educational measures to protect all children — including those with disabilities — from all forms of violence while in the care of parents, legal guardians, or any other person who has the care of the child. It reflects the urgent need to address the huge public health, social, and spiritual burden created by violence against children and poverty. From the very beginning, INSPIRE linked to the CRC as the driving force behind these strategies.

INSPIRE also aims to help countries and communities achieve key United Nations 2030 Sustainable Development Goals (SDG), which the heads of state from EVERY NATION in the world have signed. This includes “ending abuse, exploitation, trafficking, and all forms of violence against and torture of children” (Target 16.2).

THE COLLABORATION

The World Health Organization (WHO) initiated preparation of the INSPIRE package, which is a set of essential strategies that, together, dramatically reduce violence, poverty, and vulnerability in children. WHO prepared this in collaboration with the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), End Violence Against Children: The Global Partnership, the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO), the President’s Emergency Program for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), Together for Girls, the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), United States Agency for International Development (USAID), and the World Bank. Each of these agencies has a long history of galvanizing evidence-based approaches to preventing violence against children and poverty. Additionally, many church alliances and faith-based organizations have endorsed INSPIRE, mindful of the importance of using best practices to help the most vulnerable children and families. These include the World Evangelical Alliance, the World Council of Churches, World Vision, Catholic Relief Services, World Without Orphans, and Forgotten Voices, in addition to a large number of NGOs and civil society organizations.

The WWO Roadmap is moving forward to provide core resources from INSPIRE, as they highlight a small number of the very most effective programs in the world for protecting children and their families from violence, abuse, neglect, exploitation, and poverty.

We believe that when engaged churches collaborate to strengthen families by implementing these best programs with love, humility, wisdom, prayer, and integrity from God, the result will be thriving children who reach their God-given purpose. Together, we will co-labor with our Heavenly Father to change nations for generations.

PREVENTION OF VIOLENCE: A GLOBAL PRIORITY

Adapted from INSPIRE: Seven Strategies for Ending Violence Against Children, available here in Arabic, Bulgarian, Chinese, English, French, Georgian, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, and Ukrainian wworoadmap.org/resource/inspire

WHO, UNICEF, the CDC, the World Bank, and the UNODC estimates more than 1 billion children — one out of every two — experience physical, sexual, or psychological violence every year. Violence against children and adolescents includes physical, sexual, and emotional abuse and neglect. For infants and younger children, violence mainly takes the form of maltreatment at the hands of parents, caregivers, and other authority figures. As children grow, peer and intimate partner violence — bullying, fighting, sexual violence, online sexual exploitation, and assault — become more common.

Magnitude of Violence Against Children

Over the course of their childhood, one in four children suffers physical abuse and almost one in five girls and one in 13 boys suffer sexual abuse. For children with disabilities, rates of abuse are three to four times higher than for other children. Tragically, such violence commonly is perpetrated by people the child knows and trusts and in places that should be safe, such as homes and schools. Such violence against children and adolescents has devastating health, social, and spiritual consequences, and often children with disabilities are at even greater risk. Exposure to violence at an early age can impair brain development and lead to a host of lifelong physical and mental health consequences. Social consequences of violence include disruption of families. For example, a study of street youth in Eastern Europe found that these youth went to the streets because they felt safer there than at home. Despite its high prevalence, violence against children is often hidden. Though such violence may be hidden, the destructive consequences eventually surface.

In many countries, the size of the violence problem is greatly underestimated because estimates come from reporting data used by justice systems and not from national survey data. Child abuse rates are also underestimated because of the widespread beliefs that lead people — including children — to see violence as normal rather than a problem demanding attention. Furthermore, children who do report such violence are often not believed, and no protective legal action is taken. In such situations, gatekeepers, including faith leaders, teachers, and police officers, have an opportunity to speak on behalf of abused children as an advocate for their protection in alternative family care. The global Church is uniquely positioned to prioritize the best interests of the child as the highest value in considerations of abuse and its implications. Of note, the advocacy of faith leaders in Zambia led the government to ask church leaders to identify safe families who could be trained to provide emergency foster care for such children. Increasingly, governments recognize the potential of faith leaders and congregations to promote justice and show compassion for vulnerable children and families.

Root Causes of Violence Against Children and Vulnerability are Similar to Root Causes of Orphanhood

Much of this violence and its enormous impact can be prevented through programs that address its root causes and risk factors. Violence arises from an interplay of factors related to the child, the family, the community, and the society, and these four levels represent key entry points for the INSPIRE strategies. Of note, poverty is both a root cause of violence and vulnerability and it is also a root cause of orphanhood; thus, addressing poverty contributes to both preventing abuse and preventing orphanhood. As described earlier, the World Without Orphans cornerstones include a similar description of these same four levels (child, family, church community, and movement) — all contextualized within a fifth cornerstone: the care, help, compassion, and provision of God.

Components of INSPIRE

The INSPIRE package includes seven strategies that together provide an overarching framework for ending violence against children. Each strategy is accompanied by a key goal, the rationale for the strategy, its potential effects on preventing violence against children, and specific approaches (including types of programs, practices, and policies) that advance the strategy.

Finally, each strategy will include at least one specific link to a recommended program or resource for churches that can be accessed at no cost by participants at the 2019 Global Forum for a World Without Orphans. The selection of recommended programs or resources for churches was made by including programs that have been evaluated using experimental research methods, in countries around the world, shown to work, and made available at no cost for the WWO community. This recommendation of an example model program for each strategy is not intended to suggest that other programs in use should be discontinued, and it does not mean that other programs are ineffective. Our recommendation simply includes programs for each INSPIRE strategy that have been rigorously evaluated and are recognized by the very top experts around the world as being those that have been shown to work in protecting children from abuse. The ones included here have also been adapted or can be easily adapted for use in faith settings.

National and local pastors and faith leaders who use INSPIRE will often be implementing aspects of the activities within the context of a local church. In light of the central place of the Scriptures in influencing motivation, prayer, and action for faith leaders and faith collaborations, the WWO Roadmap includes a Biblical reference that supports each strategy.

The INSPIRE strategies were as far as possible chosen to represent programs and policies that have been implemented and evaluated in low-resource settings. Where drawn from high-income settings, interventions that appear especially effective in reducing violence against children — and also likely to succeed across various cultural settings — were selected. In practice, the effectiveness of the strategies and approaches included in INSPIRE will depend on the quality and characteristics of their implementation.

2 STRATEGIES, APPROACHES, AND PROGRAMS OF INSPIRE

Implementation and Enforcement of Laws

The aim of this strategy is to ensure the implementation and enforcement of laws and policies to prevent child sexual abuse and child physical abuse, reduce excessive alcohol use, and limit youth access to weapons. Laws prohibiting violent behaviors such as sexual abuse or violent punishment of children signal that society considers these behaviors unacceptable. Such laws provide a way to hold perpetrators accountable. Laws and policies can also reduce key risk factors for violence against children. Specific Child-Safeguarding Policies are now considered essential for every organization working directly with children, including governments, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), faith-based organizations, and churches. These Child-Safeguarding Policies outline when it is necessary for gatekeepers to report suspected child abuse to legal authorities. Child protective custody is used by legal authorities when they believe a child's health or welfare is in danger. A social worker or police officer can place a child into protective custody if he or she believes immediate action is needed to protect a child from abuse or neglect.

Expected outcomes:

- Reductions in physical violence towards children by parents, caregivers, and authority figures
- Reductions in sexual abuse of children, including forced or pressured sex, unwanted attempted sex, and unwanted sexual touching
- Reductions in sexual exploitation of children including trafficking, pornography, and prostitution
- Reductions in excessive alcohol consumption and binge drinking
- Reductions in need for child protective services and need for alternative family care associated with sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, physical abuse, and neglect
- Reductions in firearm-related deaths and nonfatal injuries
- Increases in positive gender and social norms

Recommended resource for churches, for each organization participating in National Without Orphans collaborative teams, when the organization has contact with children:

- How to Begin Developing and Updating a Safe Sanctuaries Policy
www.roadmap.org/resource/safe-sanctuaries-policy
- Creating Safe Environments for Children — VIVA
www.roadmap.org/resource/safe-environments

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Implementation and Enforcement of Laws: Rom 13:1 "Let everyone be subject to the governing authorities, for there is no authority except that which God has established."

Norms and Values

Social and cultural norms can create a climate in which violence is encouraged or normalized. In many countries, such harmful norms are even more common for children with disabilities. This strategy aims to strengthen norms and values that support non-violent, respectful, nurturing, positive, inclusive, and gender equitable relationships for all children and adolescents. Achieving this often requires modifying deeply ingrained social and cultural norms and behaviors — in particular, the idea that some forms of violence are not only normal, but sometimes justifiable. It involves approaches such as community mobilization programs, bystander interventions, and small group programs that challenge harmful gender and social norms of boys. In the area of inclusivity, media has a key role; by including children with disabilities in stories, films, and books, media sends the message that all children are important for families and communities.

Expected outcomes:

- Reduced acceptance of violence against women and children
- Reductions in early and forced marriage of young girls
- More favorable beliefs towards gender equity and gender-equitable division of labor
- More favorable attitudes to nonviolent approaches to parental discipline
- Greater recognition of what constitutes abusive behavior towards children and intimate partners
- Increased bystander intervention to prevent violence against children and intimate partners
- Reductions in physical or sexual violence against a child or teen by a parent, relative, or intimate partner
- Reductions in need for child-protective services and need for alternative family care associated with sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, physical abuse, and neglect

Recommended resource for churches for training church influencers to promote healthy gender norms:

- SASA! Raising Voices — Faith Training Manual includes a Christian adaptation for helping local pastors and faith leaders catalyze transformational dialogues to advance equitable treatment of girls and boys and of women. Developed in Uganda and now used widely in many nations, studies show more than a 50% reduction in sexual abuse in communities that implement the program.

wworoadmap.org/resource/sasa-faith

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Norms and Values: Gal 3:28 “There is neither Jew nor Greek, ... nor is there male and female, for you are all one.”

James 3:17 “But the wisdom that comes from heaven is first of all pure; then peace-loving, considerate”

Safe Environments

This strategy aims to create and sustain safe streets and safe community, digital, and other environments where children and youth gather and spend time. It focuses on modifying communities' social, digital, and physical environment (rather than the individuals within it) to foster positive — and deter harmful — behaviors. It involves approaches such as problem-oriented policing directed towards “hotspots” for violence, interrupting violent conflicts by stopping retaliatory violence, and changing the built environment, including by assuring accessibility for all children, without regard to age or ability, to the highest extent possible.

Expected outcomes:

- Reductions in assault-related injuries
- Increased safety when moving around the community
- Increased digital safety online

Recommended resource for churches, for each organization participating in National Without Orphans collaborative teams:

- Global proliferation of digital technology, including mobile and internet communication platforms, have rapidly increased the online exposure of children and teens to exploitive sexual images and pornography. These new internet threats make children and teens around the world more vulnerable to sexual exploitation than ever before. It is, therefore, essential that every church and faith leader engaged in WWO Collaboration have at least a minimum level of understanding of this subject, as well as of approaches to protecting children online. We recommend this resource:

UNICEF Guide to Keeping Children Safe Online

www.roadmap.org/resource/online-safety-unesco-guide

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Safe Environments — I Kings 4:25 ‘During Solomon’s lifetime, Judah and Israel, from Dan to Beersheba, lived in safety, everyone ...’

Parent and Caregiver Support

This strategy aims to reduce harsh parenting practices and create positive parent-child relationships by helping parents and caregivers understand the importance of positive, nonviolent discipline and of close, effective communication. Parent and caregiver support can be provided through parent training programs delivered through home visiting or in groups. In these approaches, parents are educated about their children’s development and trained to adopt positive parenting practices such as nonviolent discipline and effective parent-child communication on sensitive topics. Added support may be needed for parents and caregivers of children with disabilities, including respite care and support groups.

Expected outcomes:

- Reductions in proven child maltreatment cases and referrals to child protection services
- Reductions in abusive, negative, or harsh parenting, especially in relation to discipline
- Reductions in bullying and being bullied
- Reductions in physical, emotional, or sexual violence victimization against children and youth by peers, relatives, and romantic partners
- Reductions in aggression and delinquency during adolescence
- Increases in positive parent-child interactions
- Increases in parental monitoring of child and youth safety

Recommended program for churches:

The training program Parenting for Lifelong Health is the only one recommended officially by the World Health Organization, due to it having exceptional impact on protecting children from abuse and vulnerability. While created for low literacy settings, the program is being adapted for use around the world. It is commonly used in churches. Training manuals for instructors and for parents, for these two programs, were developed by the London School of Tropical Medicine:

- Parenting for Lifelong Health for Teens — Instructors Manual and Teens Family Handbook www.roadmap.org/resource/parenting-for-lifelong-health-for-teens

- Parenting for Lifelong Health for Young Children — Instructors Manual and Parent's Handbook

www.roadmap.org/resource/parenting-for-lifelong-health-for-young-children

- Families Matter Program

Another core program that builds communication skills of parents and children that protect pre-teens and teens from sexual violence is called the Families Matter Program. It has been used in 10 countries and 800,000 families. It can be implemented using seven small group parenting sessions delivered in three-hour sessions, in churches. Information about Families Matter can be found here:

www.roadmap.org/resource/families-matter-program

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Parenting Support — I Thessalonians 2 “Mothers ‘tenderly care’; fathers ‘exhort and encourage.’”

Income and Economic Strengthening

This strategy aims to improve families’ economic security and stability, thereby reducing intimate partner violence and child maltreatment. It involves approaches such as making cash transfers to families in combination with parent training and/or on condition that they ensure their children attend school, training mothers and/or fathers and youth in Community Savings and Loan approaches, or providing microfinance in combination with education for men and women on gender norms, domestic violence, and sexuality.

Expected outcomes:

- Reductions in physical violence towards children by parents or other caregivers and in associated child protection referrals
- Reductions in intimate partner violence
- Reductions in early and forced marriage of young girls
- Reductions in children witnessing intimate partner violence in the home
- Increases in social norms and attitudes that disapprove of intimate partner violence

Recommended program for churches:

A widely used and generously available curriculum that builds the capacity of the local church to train its local leaders in appropriate aspects of small group savings and loans uses Community Savings and Loan Groups to help. The weekly small group savings and loan program is designed by HOPE International to be implemented as part of local church programs and plans. Needed resources for teaching this course can be found here:

- Restore: Savings — Church Facilitator Guide

www.roadmap.org/resource/restore-savings-church-facilitator-guide

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Income Strengthening — Luke 4:18, 21 “Jesus’ first sermon, quoting from Isa 61:1-2: “The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He has anointed me to proclaim good news to the poor... Today this scripture is fulfilled in your hearing.”

Matt 25:20 “The man who had received five bags of gold brought the other five. ‘Master,’ he said, ‘you entrusted me with five bags of gold. See, I have gained five more...’ ‘Well done, my good and faithful servant.’”

Anu from India

In India, Anu previously ran a children’s home, but as she faced burnout and began to see there were ways she could help kids remain in their families and never enter an orphanage to begin with, she changed her ministry strategy.

Now Anu and her team at her local NGO work to prevent family separation in their community in India by creating income-generating opportunities for poor families. Additionally, the NGO runs day education centers for children while their parents are at work.

Seema is one woman who has been impacted through the work of Anu and her team. Previously she struggled to provide for her daughter and pay rent for her little home. Thanks to the tailoring classes provided by the local NGO, Seema began making beautiful patchwork quilts, from which she could make an income. Today Seema can provide for her daughter and pay their rent. Family separation due to poverty and lack of access to work and education was prevented.

Response and Support Services

This strategy aims to improve access to quality health, social welfare, and justice support services for all children who need them—including for reporting violence—to reduce the long-term impact of violence. Children who have experienced sexual, physical, or emotional violence need access to a variety of services to help them heal, cope, and recover and to help break the cycle of violence. Basic health services, such as emergency medical care for violence-related injuries and clinical care for victims of sexual violence (including post-exposure prophylaxis against HIV when indicated), are the urgent priority. Where these basic child-focused services are in place, companion services can help children seek other essential aspects of care, report violent incidents, and receive added referrals. These include counseling and foster care interventions involving social welfare services.

System Strengthening: All sectors, including social services, health, and justice, are responsible for strengthening the system to ensure an effective response to violence against children. This may include the development of policies, guidelines, and national plans of action, strengthening institutions responsible for preventing and protecting children from violence, strengthening the workforce, ensuring effective coordination and collaboration between government, NGOs/FBOs, business, and faith alliances, providing comprehensive prevention and response services that ensure a continuum of care, and ensuring strong accountability and monitoring systems. The relationships among those engaged in the system are critical to ensuring the best outcomes for children. It is helpful to conduct a mapping analysis across the system, involving all stakeholders, to identify gaps and develop a plan for system strengthening.

Expected outcomes:

- Reductions in recurrence of the same type of violence in the short-term
- Reductions in trauma symptoms (e.g., posttraumatic stress disorder, depression, anxiety)
- Reductions in sexually transmitted infections and negative reproductive health outcomes
- Reductions in victimization or perpetration of violence in the short-term and later in life
- Increases in child welfare interventions, including alternative family care when needed

Recommended resource for churches:

This resource provides a short overview of the types of services needed when abuse has occurred. It will educate the reader about what types of referrals should be considered in any country, when there is concern about abuse of any child.

- Response and Support Framework Table 3 (p. 198); Foster Care (pp. 216-217), Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (pp. 218-219) in INSPIRE Handbook: Action for Implementing the Seven Strategies www.roadmap.org/resource/response-and-support-framework

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Response services — Isa 58:10 If you spend yourselves in behalf of the hungry and satisfy the needs of the oppressed, then your light will rise in the darkness."

Education and Life Skills

This strategy aims to increase children's access to more effective, gender-equitable education, social-emotional learning, and life skills training and ensure that school environments are safe, inclusive, and enabling. The aim is that schools are constructed and administered so that all children can experience quality learning and recreation together. Gains in education for both girls and boys protect against both victimization and perpetration of violence. This strategy involves approaches such as increasing enrollment in preschool (which can be particularly helpful for promoting early development in children with disabilities), primary, and secondary schools, establishing a safe, inclusive, and enabling school environment, improving children's knowledge about sexual abuse and how to protect themselves against it, adolescent intimate partner violence prevention programs, and life and social skills training programs. Programs that strengthen children's social and emotional learning enhance their communication and relationship skills and help them learn to solve problems, deal with emotions, empathize, and safely manage conflict — life skills that can prevent violence.

Expected outcomes:

- Increases in school attendance and academic success
- Reductions in aggressive and violent behaviors
- Reductions in bullying behaviors
- Reductions in physical and sexual intimate partner violence victimization and perpetration
- Increases in awareness of and improved attitudes about intimate partner violence
- Reductions in drug use and excessive alcohol use

Recommended program for churches:

Life skills programs that aim to promote healthy and equitable relationships have been shown to be highly effective. One example of such a program, Coaching Boys into Men, was associated with nearly a 50% reduction in sexual violence perpetration. Based on biblical principles, Bible verses can be added.

- Coaching Boys into Men — life skills program that is evidence-based, 12 lessons free online; leads to 50% reduction in sexual violence by teaching respect and dignity, healthy relationships wworoadmap.org/resource/coaching-boys-into-men

Biblical principle that supports this strategy:

Education and Life Skills — Proverbs 18:15 “The heart of the discerning acquires knowledge...”;
I Pet 1:5 “...make every effort to add to your faith goodness; and to goodness, knowledge; 6 and to knowledge, self-control...”

3 CROSS-CUTTING ACTIVITIES

Multisectoral Actions and Coordination

Successful delivery of INSPIRE’s evidence-based prevention program and services depends on broadscale collaboration — as described in Section 1 of the WWO Roadmap — between multiple sectors and stakeholders. These include public, private, civil society, and faith alliances — at national and local levels — and may link departments responsible for education, health, justice, finance, social welfare, civil society organizations, professional associations, faith-based organizations, academic institutions, foundations, and other NGOs.

Monitoring and Evaluation

Monitoring systems can be used to provide data on the magnitude and circumstances of violence against children, track the implementation of planned activities, assess their impact, and address gaps. For these purposes, data on violence against children from national population-based surveys and facility-based administrative systems (such as hospitals, police records, and social services) are essential.

These are strategies for ending violence against children across the health, social welfare, education, finance, and justice sectors. The strategies are intended to reinforce each other and work best in combination.

Monitoring and evaluation will play a key role in implementing and improving this package as lessons are learned. Adaptation of the strategies according to cultural context and setting will strengthen their impact.

4 RESOURCES FOR THE CHURCH

Engaging the local church typically starts with discussion, prayer, and learning about the needs of orphaned and vulnerable children and their families and about the resources that can be used and adapted for church settings. All resources listed here were cited previously in each violence-prevention strategy described in Chapter 2 of this section. Here they are arranged by who they are for — children, families, churches, or communities.

5 CONCLUSION

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development contains a bold, ambitious, and clear call to eliminate violence against children. This provides a unique opportunity to catalyze action that builds safe, stable, and nurturing relationships and environments for every child. We all have the power and responsibility to act. The seven strategies and cross-cutting activities that constitute INSPIRE are the best way to accelerate progress in ending violence against children. Let's put them to work!

The true nature of a nation's standing is how well it attends to its children. When children are hurt, we, as a society, are diminished. When we work together to end violence in their lives, we rise to the best in ourselves, we help children reach their full potential, and we promote a future of peace and dignity for the next generation.
